

Ten sayings about love and happiness

By T.

1. The worst enemy of love is not being able to express it.
2. We are not aware of being happy. We just never feel a burden to wake up in the morning, again and again.
3. The greatest traitor of the lovers is their gaze. It always tells how they really feel.
4. The longer it takes for the fruit (love) to mature, the sweeter it feels when you taste it.
5. Children are easily made happy. So, never stop being childish!
6. True love is like a terminal illness: it is incurable.
7. Happiness is a chain of small pleasures. It's a pity I'm not a jeweler.
8. Happiness is like "Fata Morgana" in the desert. When you almost reach it, a voice tells you: "Wake up! You need to wash the dishes!"
9. Lovers resemble deaf-mutes. They don't need to talk to understand each other.
10. Dreaming with your lover is the supreme pleasure. It comprises altogether, seeing, hearing, touching and having her/him.
